The negative impact of the internet on children.

The internet is a computer system that millions of computer users around the world to exchange information. All kinds of such as the interlinked hypertext documents of the world wide web (WWW) and the email services are available on the internet. The internet can be accessed almost everywhere by numerous means such as mobile phones, data cards and cellular routers.

The internet has advantages among which are information website, social networking (which is the new form of human interaction), online shopping, financial services, educational services, blogging and many others. Educational materials at all levels from pre-school to post-doctorate are available on websites. However, whatever has advantages has disadvantages. The internet, despite, all its many advantages has its negative side.

Firstly, many children now spend more time on the internet chatting with friends on Facebook and messaging. They can stay up throughout the night instead of doing their homework. This prevents them from taking their study seriously and the result is a drop or failure in their academic career.

Secondly, many children find new friends on Facebook and such friends may turn out to be fraudsters or assassins. Many children and even adults have lost their lives as a result of this, A good example is the case of Cynthia, a young lady who was murdered in cold blood in Nigerian in 2012 by Facebook acquaintances.

Furthermore, some children, when not guided by their parents, watch pornographic films. This is immoral and children who watch pornography end up practicing what they watch on the internet. Such children may be ruined and grow up to become sex addicts.

In addition, some children watch violent films on the internet. This exposes them to violence. The result is that such children love violence. They fight a lot at home and in school. There are now cases of children shooting their mates for no reason or engaging in armed robbery.

In conclusion, children should be aware that the internet, even though very useful, has a lot of disadvantages, as can be seen from the composition. Parent should guide their children so that they can make good use of the internet.
